

three hundred framed illustrations of the novels are on the walls of this room, Dickensiana.

Forster is the one indispensable biographer of Dickens, but others have written about the novelist pages which we could fill with, and one of the best of these minor celebrators of his was George Dolly, his secretary and manager. "Charles Dickens as I Knew Him," the little book in which Dolly told the story of the reading tours in Great Britain and America, is a useful compilation, full of anecdote affectionately recited. It is valuable as a record and it makes good reading. It was originally published in 1885. The Scribner reprint it, apropos of Dickens's centenary, in a popular, inexpensive edition, with illustrations and a full index.

KNOW ROGERS WAS SLAIN.

U. S. Long Ago Ordered Report on Killing of American.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The United States government heard of the killing of James Wood Rogers, the American elephant hunter, in the African jungle months ago, before his death had been publicly announced in London and had ordered a report from the American Consul, Ross J. Hazeltine, at Roma. Officials of the State Department admitted this today.

Consul Hazeltine is the only American officer in the Congo. He was instructed to gather all the facts for a full statement of the circumstances. His report has not been received.

It was said today that this government made any representations on the death of Rogers, would make them to the Belgian government, on whose territory the killing occurred.

The Norris resolution of inquiry into the killing of Rogers was favorably reported to the House today by the Foreign Affairs Committee. The measure requests the President to furnish the House all the information available on the subject and whether any action has been taken.

DARN SOCKS FOR VOTES.

Minnesota Suffragists Use the Needle for the Cause.

Minneapolis, Aug. 22.—In order to dissipate the impression that women who learn to vote at real elections do not know the first elements of housekeeping, Minnesota suffragists will maintain a booth at a state fair where every man, whether married or single, may have his socks darned. This was decided by the women yesterday, when the following was also adopted:

"That the government, darn the socks of the men who do not vote, and patch the holes in their socks."

The organization has adopted the darn-needle as its emblem.

SUNDAY'S NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

DR. MORRISON'S VIEWS

Believes Chinese Republic Is Stable and Tells Why.

London, Aug. 22.—Dr. George E. Morrison, whose appointment as adviser to President Yuan Shih-kai recently was announced, and who is now in London, in a letter to "The Times" protests against the gloomy and pessimistic views of the English newspapers concerning China.

Dr. Morrison says that when he left China, on August 6, affairs everywhere were improving, and he gives numerous reasons for his belief in the stability of the Chinese Republic.

MANCHURIA INVADED

Force of 2,000 Mongolians Occupy City of Tao-Nan.

Peking, Aug. 22.—A force of two thousand Mongolian troops has occupied the city of Tao-Nan, Manchuria, and has begun looting the houses and stores, according to a Chinese report received here. The Mongolians are said to be commanded by a lieutenant of the Kutuktu, or Shah, of Mongolia.

A detachment of Chinese troops from Moukden, with a number of Manchus, attacked them during the night of August 20, and fighting was still proceeding on the 21st. The result has not been ascertained.

The impact of President Yuan Shih-kai is still under discussion in the Chinese National Assembly. The members are, however, inclined to await the arrival here of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, ex-Provisional President, from Tien-Tsin. He arrives there to-night from Shanghai and is to proceed immediately.

The loan question is still far from settled. A group of independent capitalists proposed to advance 20,000,000 taels ($3,000,000) as a preliminary to the subsequent entire financing of China for five or ten years. Their operations were intended to be conducted by a bank worked on the same principles as the Ottoman Bank. The bank, it was proposed, should receive all revenues.

The cabinet rejected the offer, considering the terms proposed worse than those of the six-power group. A modified scheme is probable.

LOST HAT, THEN HIS LIFE

J. W. Moy, Actor, Falls from Train Near Home; Is Killed.

J. W. Moy, an actor, grabbed for his hat, which blew off as he stood on the rear platform of a New Haven train near Paltam last night, fell and was instantly killed.

He had been rehearsing with "The Underworld" in New York, and was returning to his home, No. 127 First avenue, North Polham, where he lived with his daughter, Mrs. John G. Spelling.

The accident happened almost within sight of his home. His body rolled along the tracks for twenty feet. Death was caused by a fracture of the skull.

ALGONQUIN NOT ATTACKED

One Lone Suffragette Tries to Get Into Club Meeting.

Although the suffragettes were feared by members of the Algonquin Club last night in view of the threats which floated to the club night before last, then it was said that the forces from Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's organization at No. 16 East 24th street would descend in a body on the Algonquin meeting at No. 221 East 8th street, with the idea of demanding a pledge for their cause.

But although the club held its meeting last night to designate a Senatorial candidate only one suffragette—Rheta Childs Dorr, the magazine writer—appeared. She tried to get in, but the sergeant-at-arms kept her out.

Straightaway she marched to the East 8th street police station and asked Captain Martin for police escort.

"It's a public meeting," she said, "and I want a policeman to get me inside. They can't deny me admission."

"Why can't they?" asked the captain. "It's a private meeting. However, if you want to try to force your way in I'll send a policeman along to see that you are not beaten up."

The writer did not like this, and said to the captain, "I've got your number," but whether this referred to his shield or his personal characteristics she did not explain.

If she appeared at the club again, it was after the meeting was at an end and the rooms were dark.

POLICE START NEW RAIDS

Arrest Seven Women in Inspector Hayes's Old District.

Detectives from the staff of Inspector Dwyer, who had been ordered to clean up the district which former Inspector Cornelius Hayes commanded, made another raid early this morning and arrested seven women in a house in West 46th street, which is said to have been run as a disorderly place.

As Mayor Gaynor has held that police have no right to enter a house without a warrant obtained after evidence had been secured, the two detectives were careful to get the needed evidence, according to their affidavits, and the warrant for the arrest of Jane Madam, who is a new name in the Jane Doe line, was signed by Chief Magistrate McAdoo.

The police had not the slightest trouble in getting into the house, and when they entered they found six young women in addition to the one for whose arrest the warrant had been sworn out.

Jane Madam was taken to the West 46th street police station, where she said her name was Annie Husky. The police say she really is Mae Livingston.

The prisoner was sent to the night court and the young women who were in the house were ordered to put on their street clothes and look for lodgings if they could find them at such an unlikely hour of the morning.

It is said that Inspector Dwyer intends to carry out the order of Commissioner Waldo and really clean up the district, which for so long a time has remained unmolested by the police.

MRS. BELMONT ON STUMP

Will Speak in Wisconsin Towns for Suffragettes.

(By Telegram to The Tribune.)

Milwaukee, Aug. 22.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who has been of great assistance to Wisconsin suffragettes by aiding them in launching their campaign, will make an automobile tour of the state for three weeks, with speeches twice or three times a day in the smaller cities.

It is said that the announcement received today by Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict, the Vassar "Portia," who assisted Mrs. Belmont in New York, and who came to Wisconsin after a romantic wedding with a Milwaukee insurance broker.

WIFE STICKS TO FLACK

Tells of Hardships Since They Fled from Abilene, Kan.

HE IS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Fugitive from Justice Awaits Arrival of Sheriff—Says He Made Good Speculations.

John A. Flack, former probate judge of Kansas, who was arrested in this city on Wednesday on a charge of embezzling $50,000 of the funds of the Alliance State Bank of Abilene, Kan., of which he was cashier up to the time of his disappearance, was arraigned before Magistrate Fieschi in the Tombs court yesterday and held without bail until to-morrow on his own admission that he was a fugitive from justice. But he insisted that he took only $30,000, and said all his property, which he turned over to the bank, amply covered his speculations. The bank's money, he said, he lost in real estate investments.

His wife, who seemed to be about fifty years old, sat with bowed head in one of the front seats during her husband's arraignment.

After he was remanded to the Tombs he whispered a plea to the magistrate that he be permitted to speak to her for a minute. The request was granted, and the gray haired woman who had stood by him in his two years of poverty and suffering and want was summoned by a court officer. The couple talked earnestly in lowered tones for a minute, and then, as he was being led away, he squeezed her hands and told her to be brave.

Mrs. Flack then returned to the home of her cousin, George E. Kyth, at No. 192 Palisades avenue, West Hoboken, where they had made their home for two weeks. There she was seen last night by a reporter for The Tribune. She told the story of the trials of the last two years, and said she was glad the suspense was over, as she would return to Kansas with her husband when the Sheriff arrived and was ready to make the return trip with her husband, his prisoner.

"I suppose we'll be going back Saturday," she said last night. "Well, it's all for the best. The suspense was killing John. And the hardships he underwent made him a wreck of his old self. You saw him in the court today, a thin, pale-faced man. Two years ago he was big and smiling."

"It was two years ago last January that John suggested we come East. He said he had cousins here and wanted to visit them. And, moreover, he said he was tired and needed a vacation."

"We came, and then I noticed, when we were here only a few days, that he had grown very nervous, and finally he confessed to me that he was down to his last ten dollars—that all he had in the world he had turned over to the bank, and when I started to question him he handed me a newspaper clipping, telling that he was wanted as an embezzler."

Here Mrs. Flack paused a moment to regain her composure, and then she continued:

"It was not long before we came to know the need of a crust of bread. He was unable to obtain employment such as he was capable of because he could not furnish references. And then he is not young. He dropped the name of Flack and used his first two names—John Anderson."

"As John Anderson he got a job on the docks unloading ships. But this work made him sick, and when he recovered he found employment with a directory concern as a canvasser. For this he received $7 a week. Our little room in Brooklyn cost us $1 a week and with the remainder I managed to buy enough things to cook in our cramped quarters to keep body and soul together."

"But this work did not last. Next he found work in a sausage factory. But this was only for a few hours a day, and he earned only $5 a week."

"But this scarcely gave us more than bread and coffee all through the week. Had it continued much longer both of us would have died. In desperation I wrote to my husband, asking him if he couldn't get me something to do. That same night I wrote the letter he came over to where we were living, and seeing our condition, insisted on our going to his home to live and regain our health."

"But we're going back Saturday, going back with Sheriff Young—Jack Young. But I'm sure it is all for the best. The suspense was killing us both. I'd wake up in the night out of a dream in which I saw a policeman seize my husband and drag him off to jail."

Mrs. Flack paused a minute, and then said:

"But I'll stick to him to the end."

EXPECT FACH TO RECOVER

Physicians Say District Attorney Has Gained Strength.

Dr. William Walser and George T. Morley, of the S. R. Smith Infirmary, issued a statement at 10 o'clock last night saying that Albert C. Fach, District Attorney of Richmond, now has more than an equal chance of recovery. The surgeons declared the District Attorney had improved wonderfully in the last twelve hours.

Mrs. Fach has been at the bedside of her husband in the hospital since soon after he was taken there on Monday, when he was shot by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Edmunds. The surgeons said that her presence has had much to do in helping Mr. Fach's condition.

At 4 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Fach had a sinking spell, and the surgeons feared that the end was near. An hour afterward, however, he rallied, and since then he has been steadily gaining in strength. The surgeons have also succeeded in checking the ravages of pneumonia, and his temperature since early yesterday morning has gone down from 103 to 98.

Mrs. Edmunds appeared much rejoiced when she was informed last night that Mr. Fach was improving. She said she had been praying for his recovery, and hoped it would come soon. The only visitor to call on Mrs. Edmunds was Mrs. Avery. She remained there only ten minutes. Mrs. Edmunds said she had not yet engaged a lawyer.

WALKER IS CONFIRMED

Washington, Aug. 22.—The Senate in executive session to-night, confirmed the nomination of Francis Walker, of Massachusetts, to be deputy commissioner of corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor.

It also confirmed the appointments of Frederick A. Higgins, to be appraiser of merchandise at New York City; Frank Leach, to be superintendent of mint at San Francisco, and Lewis R. Barrett, to be collector of customs at Great Egg Harbor, N. J.

$2,000,000 FOR KINDNESS

Scotchman Leaves Fortune to Man Who Befriended Him.

(By Telegram to The Tribune.)

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 22.—"Joe" Harris, sixty-six years old, now poor, but years ago a prosperous auctioneer of this city, has good cause to remember that twenty-four years ago on a winter's morning he befriended a poor stranger in the city, a man of twenty-eight, just from Scotland, whose sweet-heart had jilted him, by giving the shivering man his breakfast and employment.

This morning Colonel Cary E. Spencer, postmaster here, read to Harris a letter which stated that William Robinson had died in Brisbane, Australia, leaving his fortune of $2,000,000 to "Joe" Harris, his benefactor, who also had staked him on a trip to Alaska, where he had struck it rich in the gold fields near Cape Nome.

The letter was written by A. D. Smythe, from the Hotel Navarro, New York, Smythe stating he had just landed in that city from Brisbane, on the way to England. He had learned of the will and wrote his letter to Postmaster Willis of Nashville, who forwarded it to Colonel Spencer.

WASHES ITS OWN LINEN

Postoffice Department Sets Up a Government Laundry.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The United States now not only launders its money but also its linen, and Postmaster General Hitchcock has become a "trust buster."

Because the so-called laundry trust of Washington recently increased its contract price for washing towels used in the government departments Postmaster General Hitchcock equipped a laundry, which began operations today.

Under the old arrangements each clerk got one towel a week. With the new laundry each clerk can have three towels a week, and it will cost the government less than to have the trust wash one.

STARTS RACE WITH DEATH

U. S. Marshal Rushing Across Continent To Be with Daughter.

Atlantic City, Aug. 22.—Five minutes after his arrival here to-day with Frank Majone, a fugitive from justice, Joseph Jacoby, a United States marshal, received a telegram from Seattle stating that his young daughter had been stricken with appendicitis and was not expected to live.

Jacoby, who had planned to enjoy a night's rest at the shore, boarded a train at once, and started a race against death back to Seattle.

WART CAUSES HER ARREST

Detective Took Miss Rowling After Seeing Her Hand.

Riverhead, Long Island, Aug. 22.—A wart on her left hand was the undoing of Viola Rowling, twenty-two years old, who recently won a $100,000 prize, but who is now in the jail at this city. Detective Luke Devin, who has an eye for warts, is the man who arrested Miss Rowling in New York yesterday.

The girl is charged with grand larceny in the first degree. The missing property includes three diamond rings, a suit of clothing and a large picture that which was the property of Mrs. Arthur C. Richards, a sister of Dr. William E. Foster, of Babylon. Miss Rowling was arraigned before Justice Cooper, at Babylon today. She waived examination and was held for the grand jury.

The woman was formerly in the employ of Dr. William E. Foster, of Babylon. A week ago she disappeared. At the same time Mrs. Richards discovered that three diamond rings which she had left in the nursery, a suit of clothes and a large picture were also missing. Identification was made by means of the wart on Miss Rowling's hand.

TWEED ENGINE IN PARADE

New York Volunteers Will Pull Gift of Boss.

The old hand engine which "Boss" Tweed purchased for American Engine Company, one of the old volunteer fire companies of New York City, while he was captain of that company, and which was known as "Big Six," will head the parade of the New York State Volunteer Firemen's Association at Newburg to-day. It will be taken there this morning from Long Island City on board the steamer Sagamore by one hundred picked men from the Veteran Firemen's Association of Long Island City, under the command of Thomas E. Curran. After being hauled in the parade it will be returned to Long Island City to-night.

This old engine passed several years into the possession of the Veteran Firemen of Long Island City, and since then the firemen have succeeded in restoring it to exactly the same condition in which it was when Tweed "ran with the machine." It has been kept in the house of the firemen at Astoria, where it has attracted much attention, and at the request of the upstate volunteers, who want to see what it is like, the Long Island City men agreed to send it to Newburg in charge of a company of picked men.

The Long Island City firemen say that "Big Six" when pumped by the sturdy men of the association is capable of throwing a stream equal to that of a modern steam fire engine.

WON'T ASK T. R. TO PARADE

Women, However, Want to Know How He Stands on Suffrage.

(By Telegram to The Tribune.)

Minneapolis, Aug. 22.—Theodore Roosevelt will be asked by the Minnesota Woman Suffrage Association to include in his address at the state fair a statement as to his stand on woman suffrage, and he will be requested to make this statement explicit.

Roosevelt will not be asked to join in the suffrage parade Thursday, September 5.

"Our executive board will not go on record as endorsing either Roosevelt or his party," said Mrs. A. T. Hall, state president, "but we wish to put him in a position where he will endorse us. Personally, I approve very heartily of the platform of the Progressive party, and I admire Roosevelt as a man. He is a stamper, but we need stampers to break down the old ideas."

TAFET WOMEN ON TARIFF

Republican Worker Says It Helps Factory Labor.

CIVIL SERVICE QUESTION

Miss Boswell Comments on Effect of the President's Veto.

"Heaven will protect the working girl," runs the ditty. But heaven has an able assistant in the person of the protective tariff, according to the assertion made by a member of the woman's committee of the Republican National Committee yesterday.

"To the 1,500,000 women employed in the manufacturing industries of our country realize," she said, "that they are receiving from two to ten times greater wages than the women in the same industries abroad, and that if we open our ports to foreign products they must necessarily become idle or have their wages reduced to the foreign level." Let them meditate on that for a few moments, and then if they don't remember the pitiable conditions that existed between 1894 and 1897 let them ask some one to describe the sufferings of that period. They can't help but reach the conclusion then that the Republican policy means the highest possible returns to a woman for her work, while the Democratic policy means idleness and low wages."

Women in Civil Service.

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, chairman of the women's work of the national committee, had another reason why all working women and other women, too, should be grateful to the Republican administration, and particularly to President Taft.

It was brought to her attention particularly by hundreds of communications from women throughout the country, commending the President for his veto of the legislative bill when it carried with it the rider limiting the tenure of office of the civil service employees to seven years.

In its effect upon the hundreds of women employed in civil service work, Miss Boswell said, the enactment of such legislation would be grossly immoral.

"It would mean," she said, "that all these women clerks when their term of office expired would be thrown upon the tolerance of the influential persons who are empowered to reappoint them. And we all know what that means," she added.

"The older women would be compelled to step out for the more attractive younger women. It would mean a repetition of the system which not only spoiled the opportunity of some of the clerks but ruined the character of a great many others. Critics who have condemned President Taft for his action in vetoing a bill containing such a rider as this could not have realized its iniquity."

"The women of this country are glad that the measure was vetoed. They appreciate the President's interest in their welfare. And the fathers and brothers of the women civil service employees can't help but be grateful to a man who has the interest of their daughters and sisters at heart."

If every woman in this state is not educated to the necessity of seeing that the men of her family get out in time to register, it will not be the fault of Mrs. John Francis Yawger, chairman of the Republican state committee of women's work.

A Campaign of Education.

"We believe in three things," said Mrs. Yawger, "pure politics, patriotism and education. And we're going to do a lot of educating. What every woman in the state can do before she gets the ballot herself is to see that the men of her family have it use it, and we are making that point very clear to all the women who are asking how they can help. Let them see that their husbands and brothers get out to register, and on Election Day let them help get out the vote."

Another subject upon which most women need a little information is that the high cost of living isn't a matter of politics. It's due in a large measure to the housewife herself, who doesn't stir up a little healthy agitation to have the corner grocer buy from the markets himself instead of from the fifth in a long line of middlemen.

"That would help lower prices for her. So would more careful attention to her buying. Most women don't know how to buy or what to buy at different times of the year."

"As for the tariff having anything to do with it, are shoes any cheaper now than they were before President Taft signed the bill reducing the tariff on hides from 8 per cent to 5 per cent?"

"It's all a matter of household business methods, with two many middlemen reaping a harvest, and of inefficiency in the administration of household affairs."
